More Panama licence fraud

NEW cases of fraudulent Panamanian seafarers' licences have been uncovered by an internal investigation within the Panama Maritime Authority (AMP). Three AMP employees have been arrested and a fourth, accused of being one of the chief planners of the scam, is being sought after the discovery of 22 fraudulent certificates. Authorities say a junior messenger stole provisional licence forms at the behest of one of his managers, with the intention of selling them for up to $5,000 on the black market. The messenger co-operated with internal investigators once the fraud was discovered and all 22 licences have been recovered. It is the latest in a series of fake Panamanian seafarers' licence scams in recent years. More than 20 AMP employees have been punished for their involvement in the frauds.
